Brandt Features North American-Built Material Handler at ISRI2024

Hudson, IL—Brandt is featuring its new BMH40A material handler at the upcoming ISRI2024 tradeshow, which runs from April 15 – 18 in Las Vegas, NV. See this world-class heavy lifter at the Brandt booth A12.

The BMH40A is the only North American-designed, -built, and -supported material handler on the market.

“The industry has been looking for a heavy lifter that delivers world-class productivity with the round-the-clock support that you typically only get from an onshore-manufactured product,” says Jason Klassen, Senior VP Sales—Manufactured Products at Brandt. “The fact that it is built on proven John Deere components is a huge bonus that means increased uptime and exceptional reliability from the machine.”

Additional features include rapid cycle times that allow operators to get the job done faster, and an energy recovery system and auto-idle/shutdown that maximizes fuel efficiency, contributing to reduced cost of operation and wear of machine components.

The BMH40A was developed through Brandt’s collaborative product design process, which involved extensive consultations with contractors and operators.

“Consultation and collaboration are key elements of Brandt’s business. As a result, we have been able to design a world-class material handler improves productivity, increases uptime, and provides a lower cost of operation,” says Chris Semple, President—Manufactured Products at Brandt. “The feedback we have received on the BMH40A has been outstanding. The industry asked for this machine, and Brandt delivered.”
